Los Angeles, CA – Company of Angels, L.A.'s oldest non-profit repertory theatre, presents ARLINGTON, written by playwright and screenwriter Garry Michael White. It is produced by Tony Gatto (DRIVE, DUST), and directed by Curtis Krick and Sean Dillon (biscuits-and-gravy.com).

ARLINGTON opens Friday, September 8 and will run every Friday and Saturday at 8pm until Sept 30 and every Sunday at 3pm until September 24. Company of Angels is located at 2106 Hyperion Avenue, (corner of Lyric Avenue in Silverlake) LA, CA 90027. Gated parking available for $2, as well as ample street parking. Tickets are $18. Students/Seniors $15.

Reservations made at (323) 883-1717. www.companyofangels.org

ARLINGTON reveals America's lost innocence, by exploring the palpable evidence of the United State's constant, insatiable thirst for war. ARLINGTON shines on the struggle to maintain our humanity, and hold onto our declining virtue. The play glimpses into the post-9/11 future of our souls, as set against the wars in our country's history. In this play, no battlefield blood is spilled; no foreign soil is touched. In the end, ARLINGTON is a moving, occasionally humorous play about the reaches of war, and the inevitable ways in which we conquer ourselves.

Travis Michael Holder of BACKSTAGE WEST said of ARLINGTON: “Garry Michael White’s subtle anti-war play has a message both gentle and heart-rending” and “...(the play)...takes us on a haunted journey we hopefully won’t soon forget.”

Mr. White's 1973 Film SCARECROW was the 1973 Cannes Film Festival winner. He is also in pre-production for another play entitled RAY QUALEY, with Paul Aaron as producer.
